Governor Musgrove Proclaims “Gynecological Cancer Awareness Month”

(Jackson, MS) – Governor Ronnie Musgrove has proclaimed the month of September, as “Gynecological Cancer Awareness Month” in an effort to protect the good health and well-being of the women of Mississippi by raising awareness about gynecologic cancers.

“It is vital that we continue to work together to increase research into understanding the causes, finding effective screening and prevention strategies, and developing improved therapies for gynecologic cancers,” said Musgrove.

Gynecological cancer is the fourth largest killer of women in the United States, but if detected early, the chances of survival are much better. Mississippi is pleased to be a partner in the fight against breast cancer.
