

Gov. Ronnie Musgrove statement for Office of Nursing Workforce website

“Nurses touch the lives of Mississippians in a variety of healthcare settings and in their communities every day. Like the rest of the nation, Mississippi has shortage of nurses that is projected to worsen in the coming years. It is critical to attract more people into nursing and bolster preventative care. For the past two years, my administration has supported the office of Nursing Workforce by funding a mentorship program aimed at attracting young people into a career in nursing. My administration will continue to support the efforts of the Office of Nursing Workforce as we work together to assure Mississippi has enough nurses to address our ever-changing healthcare system.”
